

A recent New York Times Op-ed piece sounds an accurate and scary warning about the FCC's planned next stage relaxation of rules as it relates to media companies. Monopolies are extremely dangerous as it relates to the flow of communications in a free society. As such, I object to the proposal currently on the table to relax the rules regarding Media ownership. Creating monopolies, I feel, will decrease the exchange and promotion of free press. With a matter of this great importance, I request that more time be taken to study the effects this will have on free enterprise and to give the citizens of the U. S. the time needed to weigh in on this important matter. Thank you.
